Mediation Quote

"[E]veryone in conflict has a different perception of what happened, who caused it, and why. Each side tells stories that are accurate and honest - for themselves, as requests for communication, empathy, and authenticity. Both sides also tell stories that are inaccurate and dishonest - for each other, as literal facts, and as requests for surrender or acceptance of blame.... [E]veryone in conflict views the world from the inside out, and finds empathy and honesty difficult with those they detest or by whom they feel detested. Their willingness to accept responsibility is distorted by their need for sympathy and support, or their desire to make themselves appear right by making others appear wrong.

Dear Friends and Colleagues:

This edition of Dispute Resolution Update features recent mediation-related court decisions, as well as news describing dispute resolution initiatives in this country and throughout the world. The information has been summarized by Keith L. Seat, a respected mediator and Editor of the International Academy of Mediators' newsletter.

FLORIDA SUPREME COURT AMENDS MEDIATION PROCEDURES

Effective January 1, the Florida Supreme Court has amended its rules on who must attend mediation. The amendments require that final decision-makers on all issues in the case appear in person at the mediation and have the legal capacity to enter into a binding settlement agreement. The Rule maintains its former requirement that insurance representatives must appear in person with full authority to settle the case for plaintiff's last demand (or policy limits) if lower "without further consultation." The Rule establishes a requirement that the identities of those who will be attending mediation and confirmation of their authority must be submitted to the Court ten days before the mediation sessions, unless the parties stipulate otherwise. In re Amendments to Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.720, No. SC 10-2329 \(Fla., November 3, 2011\); Claims Journal \(November 21, 2011\)

WEST VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT ADDRESSES THE FAILURE TO APPEAR AT MEDIATION WITH FULL SETTLEMENT AUTHORITY

The West Virginia Supreme Court reversed a financial sanction imposed for violation of local rules requiring attendance at mediation by an insurance representative with full settlement authority. The Court found that the sanctioned insurer did not receive adequate notice of an initial court-ordered mediation. After receiving only three days' notice, the representative of the insurer failed to appear in person because of missing a flight, but did participate by telephone, and, showed up in person for the final mediation session the next day. RECENT MEDIATION CASES & RESOLUTIONS

CASES & RESOLUTIONS:

Federal Circuit Concludes that Non-Binding Arbitration Is Not Mediation, So No Decision Reached on Mediation Privilege

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit readily concluded that arbitration is not mediation simply because it is non-binding and intended to facilitate settlement. A key confirming element was that ex parte contact with the arbitrators was prohibited, so the parties could not speak openly and freely about their case with a neutral. Because mediation was not involved, the appellate court declined to determine whether there is a federal mediation privilege as found by the district court. West Virginia Supreme Court Reverses Sanctions, But Confirms that Failure to Appear at Mediation with Full Settlement Authority Is Sanctionable

While affirming the principle that sanctions can be imposed for violation of local rules requiring attendance at mediation by an insurance representative with full settlement authority, the West Virginia Supreme Court reversed sanctions exceeding $270,000. The Court concluded that the sanctioned insurer (which acquired the first insurer) did not receive adequate notice of the first court-ordered mediation; did not act in bad faith by reducing an offer from $700,000 to $350,000 because a second representative did not know of the first mediation; and did not deserve sanctions after receiving only three days' notice of a mediation session, when the insurance representative failed to appear in person because of missing a flight, did participate by telephone, and showed up in person for the final mediation session the next day. On the other hand, the Court expressed surprise that no sanctions were imposed for the "egregiously deceptive" conduct of the insurance representative at the first mediation who did not have authority to agree to the $900,000 she thought was appropriate and went back to the insurer to seek authorization.

Attorney's Signature Not Sufficient for Binding Settlement Agreement When Party Is Present

A Georgia appellate court reversed summary judgment which enforced a mediated settlement agreement based only on the signature of a party's attorney when the party himself had refused to sign the agreement and stormed out of the mediation. The appellate court concluded that with the party present and signature lines for both the party and attorney, there was no issue of apparent authority on which the lower court relied in enforcing the agreement.

Massive Federal Drug Litigations Turn to Mediation

GlaxoSmithKline has reached a $3 billion settlement of federal civil and criminal charges over the diabetes drug Avandia, and a federal judge has ordered mediation of the thousands of remaining patient claims. The judge appointed a mediator and set a 75-day deadline to resolve 85% of the remaining cases. Earlier this year, GlaxoSmithKline agreed to resolve over 10,000 patient cases for more than $700 million. In a separate matter involving multidistrict litigation against Merck over its Vioxx painkiller, a federal judge delayed litigation by state attorneys general a year ago to give time for global mediation. Merck has now agreed on payments to the states of Florida, New York and South Carolina, although the size of the settlements is confidential. Merck has paid $4.85 billion to settle patient lawsuits involving Vioxx. MedCityNews (November 9,2011); Businessweek (November 15, 2011)

NEWS & INITIATIVES:

EEOC Increases Monetary Recoveries in Mediation to $170 Million

The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission reports that in fiscal 2011 it again set a record for the amount of monetary relief obtained for victims of discrimination, at $365 million, of which over $170 million was obtained in mediations. About 100,000 discrimination charges were filed with the EEOC in 2011, but the agency reduced its backlog so that fewer than 80,000 matters were pending late in the year. JD

Florida Supreme Court Strengthens Rules on Who Must Attend Mediation

The Florida Supreme Court adopted amendments to the state's mediation procedures relating to who must appear at mediations, which take effect on January 1. The amendments require that final decision-makers on all issues in the case appear in person at the mediation and have the legal capacity to enter a binding settlement agreement. The rule continues to require insurance representatives to appear in person with full authority to settle the case for plaintiff's last demand (or policy limits, if lower) "without further consultation." The identities of those who will be attending a mediation and confirmation of their authority must be submitted to the court and all parties ten days before the mediation session, unless the parties stipulate otherwise. Failure to comply with the rules can result in imposition of sanctions, including mediation fees, attorneys' fees and costs. Some are concerned about the impact on insurers located out of state and the difficulty of providing a person with sole authority to settle for policy limits. ACR Offers Model Standards for Mediation Certification Programs

In an effort to address the patchwork of mediation certification programs around the country, the Association for Conflict Resolution has developed a set of Model Standards for Mediation Certification Programs. ACR encourages governmental, non-profit and private organizations to rely on its Model Standards to enhance mediation quality for the benefit of the field and the public. Twenty-four standards are covered in ten pages, embodying numerous policy decisions throughout, such as not considering academic degrees of any kind in mediator certification. Ontario Insurance Regulator's Mediation Backlog Continues to Grow

A significant mediation backlog has arisen for claimants in disputes with insurers before Ontario's insurance regulator, the Financial Services Commission of Ontario (FSCO). Mediations are taking 10-12 months to complete, rather than the 60 days required by law. Applications for mediation have arisen by 135% over the last five years, with half of all injury claims ending up in mediation (when the insured is not satisfied with the amounts offered by the insurer). Although FSCO is completing 50% more cases with no increase in staff in the last five years, FSCO expects the mediation backlog to continue to increase; 36,000 new mediation applications are expected in the current fiscal year, up 18% from last year. FSCO is seeking approval to hire external mediation providers to address the backlog because government hiring restrictions prevent bringing on more internal staff. UPDATE ON HOME FORECLOSURE MEDIATION

Update on Home Foreclosure Mediation

- Federal legislation was introduced by Congresswoman Frederica Wilson (D-FL) on December 8 which would provide for mediation between borrowers and lenders prior to foreclosure. H.R. 3595, the Mandatory Foreclosure Mediation Act, was referred to the Committee on Financial Services. South Florida Caribbean News (December 8, 2011); H.R.3595
- The Florida Supreme Court terminated its statewide mandatory foreclosure mediation program due to lack of success. Only 4% of cases eligible for mediation concluded with a settlement. Borrowers often were not contacted; when they were, mediation settlements increased to 27%. In ending the statewide program, the Court noted that the state's Circuit Courts have the responsibility to manage residential foreclosure cases and may refer cases to mediation. - A new Florida mediation program may help homeowners going through Chapter 13 bankruptcy obtain mortgage modifications to prevent foreclosure of their homes. Thus far, 90% of homeowners who have entered the Bankruptcy Mortgage Modification Mediation Program have obtained mortgage modifications. The program was launched in Orlando, is expanding into Manatee and Sarasota counties and could be statewide by the end of 2012. DigitalJournal (December 16, 2011)
- The Nevada Supreme Court concluded that even though a lender had failed twice to mediate as required, it did not lose its security interest and could bring another foreclosure action. The Court rejected the homeowners' assertions of issue and claim preclusion and affirmed the lower court's order that the matter be sent to mediation as part of the subsequent foreclosure process. Holtv.RegionalTrusteeServicesCorp., 127 Nev. Adv. Op. No. 80 (Nev. December 15, 2011)
- The Nevada foreclosure mediation program, run by the Nevada Supreme Court, has conducted over 12,000 homeowner mediations, of which some 11,000 did not result in foreclosures, and in about 3,700 the homeowners were allowed to remain in their homes, according to the program. A California nonprofit group is seeking to verify those claims of success, but has been told it would cost them $940,000 to review the records. The state asserts that it would cost that much to redact the 600,000 requested documents in order to preserve mediation confidentiality. LasVegasSun (November 19, 2011)
- Las Vegas, Nevada has launched an advertising campaign to increase awareness of free assistance by approved counselors relating to foreclosure mediation and related topics. The three-month campaign is funded by a grant from Fannie Mae and HUD. FOX5LasVegas (November 9, 2011)
- Hawaii's May 2011 legislation requiring mediation of non-judicial foreclosures continues to significantly constrain the number of foreclosures in the state, with only one-third the number of foreclosure filings compared to a year earlier. The necessary mediation process for non-judicial foreclosures was not available until October 3, but lenders have not used the non-judicial process during the first month and say it will not be used because of punitive penalties for even minor infractions. A legislative push to make the law more palatable to lenders - while still protecting homeowners is likely in 2012. HonoluluStar-Advertiser (November 10, 2011)

- Recent legislation in Delaware created a Foreclosure Prevention Office that assists homeowners facing foreclosure with mediation and other issues. Delaware's mandatory foreclosure mediation program begins in January. WGMD.com (November 17, 2011)
- Although two bills addressing foreclosure died in the Oregon legislature when the 2011 session ended on June 30, Oregon legislators intend to renew the effort, which may include pre-foreclosure mediation, in the new session beginning in February.
